An exciting future in nursing?

Oldies but Goodies: Population Ages — Demand for Nurses Tops the Charts

They often did the “Twist and Shout.” Sometimes they caught “Saturday Night Fever.” On nights and weekends, they could be found getting, “Into the Groove.” But today, quite frankly, those wild and crazy loved ones born between 1946 and 1964 (baby boomers) are part of the older, aging population. In fact, according to information from www.agingstats.com, this group started turning 65 last year, and the number of older people will increase dramatically between now and 2030. It has never been a more opportune time to work in healthcare and be a nurse.

“At Herzing University, students can prepare to become a licensed practical nurse in 10 to 14 months,” said Dr. Steven Rush, PhD, RN, Chair of Healthcare and Director of Nursing at Herzing University in Madison.

“Our students love our accelerated program because it allows them to finish faster and begin their professional careers,” Rush said.

Herzing University students can earn an associate degree in the LPN (Licensed Practical nurse) to Registered Nurse Bridge program in just 20 to 24 months. The university’s “No Wait List” policy means students are enrolled as nursing students from day one. The hands-on nursing labs provide the right environment to gain the knowledge and skills needed to succeed.

“All of the programs are taught by experienced and seasoned nurses,” Rush said. “The benefits are real. And our students love the individualized attention they receive.”

Already credentialed?

For students who have already earned a degree and are ready to reach higher, Herzing University offers an RN to BSN (Bachelor of Science in Nursing) program that takes 24 to 28 months. This degree helps place students on the path to advance into graduate programs and pursue advance practice management positions and even nursing faculty positions.

Herzing University is a career-focused school offering diploma programs and associate, bachelor’s and master’s degrees in technology, business, healthcare, design and public safety. Herzing offers online programs as well as on-site classes and support at its locations on the east and west sides of Madison.
